

Writer: Terry Rose should file suit against Evers on his own dime

Aug 9, 2020

Attorney Terry Rose, who is a member of the Kenosha County Board, was quoted in the July 31 edition of the Kenosha News as follows concerning Gov. Tony Evers' statewide mask mandate:

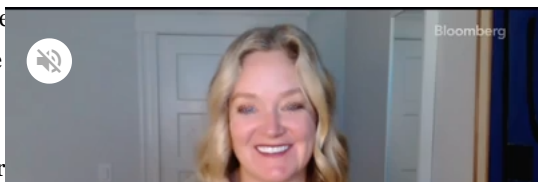

"I don't like government telling you whether to wear a mask or not without any legislative authority."

He also told the reporter that he was considering a lawsuit if a client comes along. One would assume that he is referring to a "paying client."

If Attorney Rose is so concerned about the governor exceeding his limits of the Legislature, he doesn't need a paying client. He is clearly able to file a lawsuit in his own name as a pro se litigant.

If he feels that strongly about this alleged invasion on the Legislature, he should file a lawsuit so on his own dime.
